FUTURITY SHOW ASSURED STATE FAIR

GARRETT IN CONFERENCE WITH BOARD AT JEFFERSON CITY

NO SWINE PAVILION

Bill Signed But Can't Complete In Time—Will Cost $135,000 When Finished.

W .O. Garrett, who returned this morning from Jefferson City has traveled 2000 miles in thirteen days in the interest of the breed promotion association for which he is representative. He announced this morning that the state fair board with which he and C. G. McCahan, field representative for the eastern territory, have been in conference, will put on a futurity show at the state fair in Sedalia this summer. The swine pavilion for the fair will not be ready for use this year, however. The governor just has signed the bill for a $135,000 building but it will not be possible to have it ready for this year's fair, according to Mr. Garrett.

Mr. Cahan will be in Maryville next week and will remain here for about 10 days. He will assist Mr. Garrett in his field work in southern Missouri and the eastern part of the state.

While away Mr. Garrett attended a conference of the executive committee at Peoria, Ill., visited Shenandoah, Iowa to arrange for a futurity show there. He also visited Hamburg, Iowa and Platte City, Mo., Platte City has the largest pig club in the state composed entirely of boys and girls interested in Poland-Chinas. The members are alive and interested in their club work.

COMMITTEE IN CHARGE THURSDAY, FRIDAY, SATURDAY

HANDWORK ON EXHIBIT

Sunday Schools Want Names All Children Under 12 Years Old—Basket Dinner at Barnard

Booths will be open in the Robinson Building for the registration of all children under 12 years old, from 2 o'clock to 6 o'clock Thursday, Friday and Saturday afternoon, according to Mrs. Ellis G. Cook, superintendent of the children's division in this district. There will be exhibits of work from children in all of the Sunday school. Maps, handwork and other articles that have been made by the children in their Sunday School work will be shown. Mrs. Cook has asked the following Sunday School workers to have charge Miss Dessa Gault, Mrs. Joe Cornell, Mrs. Charles Gaugh, Miss Mary Rickman and Miss Laura White.

The registration of children is not confined to Sunday school children but includes all others in the community. The Sunday schools of this districts have entered into the plans made for the celebration and are having not only what Mrs. Cook has suggested but individual stunts as well.

The Other Districts Planning Events.

Mrs. Robert Bridges, president of the fifth district composed of White Cloud and Grant Twp., Mrs. Paul Gorsuch, superintendent of the children's division have planned a basket dinner and song festival for Sunday at the grove near Barnard. The children of the district will attend Sunday school at their Sunday Schools and gather at the Grove for the basket dinner. After the dinner a song festival will be held in the grove. The Barnard band will give a concert. All of the stunts planned are open to the children of the district regardless of the fact whether they go to Sunday school or not.

TWO PARNELL BOYS IN JUVE NILE COURT SOON

Gale Boyd and Carlos Murphy Were up in Circuit Court Today, But Cases Will be Transferred.

Gale Boyd and Carlos Murphy, 16 year-old boys of the Parnell community, were up in circuit court today on a charge of petit larceny. Boyd entered a plea of not guilty and his case was continued until September with his father, George Boyd, as surety on a bond of $300. On account of his age, Boyd's case will be transferred to the juvenile court. Young Murphy entered no plea and the boy was turned over to the custody of Sheriff Roach. His case wil come up in juvenile court soon.

The two boys in Boyd's car left Parnell some time Sunday evening with the intention of going to Colorado. They are charged with stealing some cylinder oil, gasoline, canvas cover over a tractor, and a monkey wrench from Alvin Hughes, who lives on the George Felton farm near Parnell. Monday morning on account of the rain, the boys left the car with Clyde Middleton in Maryville, Mrs. Middleton being an aunt of Mrs. Gale Boyd and they returned to Parnell.

Young Boyd is married, having married about four months ago.

GERMAN PROPOSALS NOT ACCEPTABLE

DIFFERENCE BETWEEN OFFER AND DEMAND TOO GREAT.

VAGUE ALSO SAYS FRANCE

Hughes Expected to Say on Which Side America Will Throw Moral Influence.

Paris, April 27.—The German indemnity proposals in present form are not acceptable to France, was the declaration today in official circles. Officials said the difference between the German offer and the allied demand so great that there is nothing left for France to do but reject the German proposition.

A demand was made in parliamentary quarters that "strong and energetic penalties be levied upon Germany at once." Among the chief complaints of the French are that the German proposals are too vague to be worth serious discussion.

Washington, April 27. — Reports cabled from Paris that the French foreign office has instructed Ambassador Jusserand to notify the state department that German reparations proposals are unacceptable to France could not be verified today. At the French embassy it was officially stated "the embassy will neither confirm or deny reports."

Washington, April 27.—Secretary Hughes was expected today to decide whether moral influence of America is to be thrown behind the latest German reparations proposals with a view of resuming negotiations. The situation is extremely delicate. The proposal of Germany has created a distinctly favorable impression here and predictions are freely made that the state department would see fit to recommend favorable consideration by the allied governments and make suggestion that discussions be reopened.

COLLEGE PARK CHILDREN GIVE PROGRAM FOR SCHOOLMATE

ALTOGETHER A FAMILY AFFAIR

Small Freddie's Explanation Comprehensive, Though Savoring Some-What of Disrespect.

On his birthday Freddie received a present of a beautiful model steam engine from his grandfather. He played with it until he managed to break off one of the wheels.

His mother was very angry with him, and punished him by putting him in the corner.

When father came home he noticed Freddie's suspicious red eyes.

"Hallos, sonny!" he cried. "What's the trouble?"

"Oh, nothing," replied Freddie.

"But look here, old chap," said father kindly, "tell me. I want to know."

Freddie's lip quivered as he answered: "Well, if you must know, I've just been having a row with your wife!"—London Tit-Bits.

BIG RANCHES ARE PASSING

Wyoming Cattleman Sees in the Fact a Certainty of High Prices for Beef Cattle.

The cattle countries of the great northwest are undergoing a tremendous change, according to Fisher B. Weaver of Wolf, Wyo., owner of a large ranch in that section. Prices of beef are bound to go up even more, and it is very unlikely that they will ever again return to prewar figures in cattle raising, according to Mr. Weaver, says the New York Times.

"The big ranches are passing," he said. "The average ranch now will not run more than 700 head of cattle, as against many thousands in the old days. Horses are being raised in greater number than cattle. However, when things get settled more beef will be produced than ever before, but it will be fed. This beef will weigh more and it will bring a much higher price. I doubt if it will ever go any lower again, but the quality will be improved.

"There was a day when the cattle were driven south in the winter and came back north in the summer, but now the rancher is limited as to area almost entirely by the necessity of being next to a federal forest reserve. There isn't enough land on which to run a big bunch of cattle without using these reserves."

To the motorist who has quit guessing about tires—

ALONG about this time of year a man finds his motoring neighbors getting anxious about their tires. With folks expecting old tires to "pop" any minute, there comes the question of what kind of new ones to buy.

U. S. Tires are answering a lot of questions like this nowadays.

* * *

The U. S. Tire following embraces two kinds of tire buyers.

Those who started with quality first, and have never bought anything else but the quality standard tire.

Those who came to quality first only after dabbling with "bargains," "rebates," "job lot" and "surplus stock" tires.

* * *

Getting one hundred cents value on the dollar in tire buying is a straight-forward business proposition—not guess-work or a game of wits.

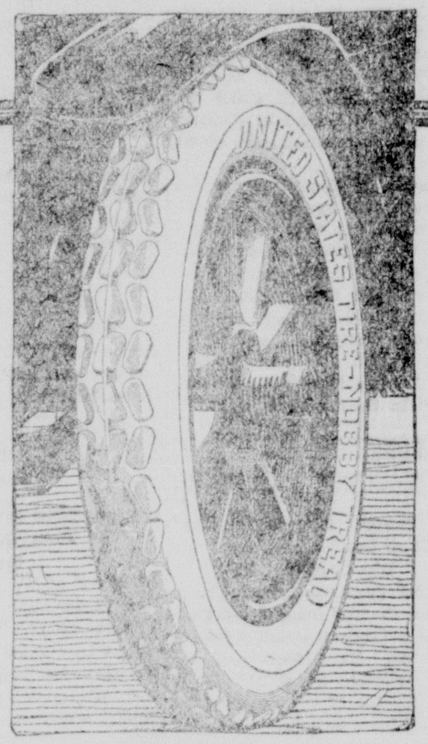
The most essential man for you to know today is the local U. S. Tire dealer who is concentrating on a full, completely sized line of U. S. Tires.

He gets his U. S. Tires straight from his neighboring U. S. Tire Factory Branch—one of 92 such Branches established and maintained all over the country by the U. S. Tire makers.

* * *

He is the man who can give you fresh, live tires—not stuff shipped to him from some point where it did not sell, but new tires of current production.

Giving the same quality, selection and price-advantage to the owner of the medium weight car as the big car owner gets. With equal service and buying opportunity whether he lives in the smaller localities or the greater centers of population.



THE U. S. NOBBY TREAD

Where the going is specially heavy with snow, mud or sand, in hilly country where maximum traction on the road is a factor, no other tire tread yet devised is quite so effective, or so wholly approved by motoring opinion, as the U. S. Nobby Tread.

Its very simplicity—two diagonal rows of oblong studs, interlocking in their grip on the road—is the result of all the years of U. S. Rubber experience with every type of road the world over.

"The most essential man for you to know today in the tire business is your local U. S. Tire Dealer."

BETTY

By RUBY H. MARTYN.

(©, 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Betty Allen's red hair flamed loose in the sunshine as she ran up the trim gravel path with the letter clutched in one hand and the soft parcel tucked carelessly under her blue gingham sleeve. Back in the kitchen she tossed the parcel on the chair and hurried to turn the ham in the smoking spider. The letter she tore open and read in the fragrant haze of the cooking dinner.

"Very nice about wanting me to come and sends a present to wear," she paraphrased at the end.

Her brother Bob mumbled something into the hand towel he was using on his suds-flecked face. Bob understood that the letter was from a cousin, Jane Dow Winslow, whom Betty had discovered in Don's home city. Don had worked on a local road survey for a month, that was long enough for him to discover Betty, and now Betty was going to visit this cousin Jane, whom the Allens had never seen, and run the gauntlet of Don's family under her wing.

"I suppose city people expect a country girl to have dowdy duds," flared Betty, as she flipped the ham again. "I just guess they don't need to send me clothes, if we are poor."

"Find out what's come before you fly clear off the handle," suggested Bob.

Betty snipped the parcel string with the lampwick scissors, which happened to be handiest. The stiff paper and soft, white inner wrappings fell from the folds of silken stuff that billowed out over her firm, brown hands.

"Red!" gasped Betty, flushing hotly.

Bob gazed with manly admiration at the crepe de chine that glowed and gleamed in his sister's hands. He had never imagined that stuff for clothes could be quite so alluringly beautiful.

"It's a peach of a color," he said.

"It'll make me look like a perfect fright! You never heard of a red dress on a red-haired girl, and I might just as well give up the whole trip as wear this color a single time. And it's real crepe de chine that I've always dreamed I might have a dress of if fairy dreams could come true!" wailed Betty.

"Then why in tunket didn't they send a black piece of goods?" temporized Bob.

"I hate black," flashed Betty. "I hate the everlasting colors red hair has to wear, and if you know how I want to get into the glaringest red that other girls can, you'd wonder I don't use hair dye."

"Send the goods back. Tell the Jane we can get up clothes enough for you," said Bob.

"I'd go in my old silk if this wasn't red. I don't know just what to think, Bob. Either cousin Jane is an awful cat, or she wants to see her present come flying back, and I declare if she is going to see that!"

There was a wry smile on Betty's piquant face as she put the smooth folds of the silken stuff on a parlor chair. She was determined to run the gauntlet of cousin Jane and the Winslow family with her head in the air. Betty was flying the colors of her love for Don as she made drastic plans for that crepe de chine.

She reached the city some weeks later in the dusk of a feathery snow. Her new shoes slid awkwardly on the soft rugs that lay on cousin Jane's polished floors. There were strange hands to take off her wraps; and up in her own room Betty peered with some alarm at the cavernous closets and tiled bath and cheval mirrors and shaded lights.

Could Betty have guessed it, Cousin Jane in her own luxurious room was even more uncomfortable.

"The child has red hair!" she wailed. "I knew Don raved about red, but I never guessed the reason."

Cousin Jane's husband grinned.

"I wonder if her temper matches," he ventured.

"I wonder what she thought of that red stuff. The Allens always did have sense enough to know when they are insulted. But if Betty shows herself to Don Winslow in that shade of red he'll blink."

Cousin Jane snapped the clasp of her bracelet. She crossed the hall and knocked at Betty's door. When there was no answer she pushed open the door. A plain brush lay on the dressing table; Betty's shoes stood with heels against the wall, but Betty herself was not there.

Don's voice was what Cousin Jane heard as she went down the wide staircase, and a slender, radiant Betty in shimmering black smiled shyly from the deep chair Don had drawn to the open fire.

At midnight Betty knelt by Cousin Jane, too happy for many words.

"Don's determined to keep loving me, and his people were dear. And when I'm so happy I don't want to be going a bit under false colors. Dear Cousin Jane, I dyed your beautiful red present until it was black as a hat. And I made it into this dress because I wanted Don to keep loving me."

"You are a dear, loyal diplomat," smiled Cousin Jane.

Betty jumped to her feet.

"Trust a red haired girl!" she said, gayly.

The Old County Fair

What has become of the old-fashioned county fair with its floral hall and half-mile track and the balloon ascention?

Have you forgotten "Lunchie" Edwards, the town feller who always conducted a lemonade stand in a tent near the main entrance, and didn't do anything else until the next annual county fair? You have not forgotten how he would woo the nickels out of the pockets of the tight country jakes who were seeing the sights with their favorite young ladies?

Why do you go by, with those
Rosy lips so dry, and
Lemmo, lemmo-nade, so nigh?

That always got'em, didn't it? For lemonade in those days was a favorite beverage. And Mr. Jake would look questioningly at his young lady and she would roll up her eyes like an expiring kip and he was 10 cents poorer.

And the popcorn stands!

And the horse races, where every horse was to be a winner. And the foot races. Do you remember Horace Free, who worked at the City Hotel choring during the winter and when the fair came on entered the foot races, and the country jakes didn't think that red-faced guy could run, and he got all kinds of bets out of them with his own money and that of his friends. And the money was put up in safe hands and the foot race was announced from the judges' stand. And Horace, who stepped down to the track in overalls, took them off quickly, and there he stood, radiant and menancing in a complete set of tights, spangles and all? You have not forgotten the look on the faces of the country jakes who had money up against him when they saw those tights? and the professional look to them, and the glitter in the eye of him who had them on?

And he let the others get a start on him, and then he shot by them like a cork, turning on the course to make faces at the slow-moving vans behind? And he got the money? And the jakes got mad and started to look for him, but he had left town and was never seen again? And they found out afterwards that his name wasn't Horace Free at all, but something else, and that he was a professional foot racer?

And the balloon ascension and the fat stock show and the laces and embroidery and the canned fruit and pumpkin pies in floral hall manufactured by the leading wives of Jones County.

And you stood around watching them fill the balloon with hot air, the stove pipe sticking out of the ground, and you thought they never would get it full so you could see the man go up. And after a while the big black thing that looked like a cyclone cloud out in Kansas began to wrinkle outward and to sway in the gentle fall breeze and a man came out of a little tent with tights on and the sun shone on them and he looked like clusters of diamonds, and you wished you were he. And the balloon went up, only there was no parachute and you never knew how he was coming down. And you felt sorry for him when dad read in the paper that he fell on a roof next time he went up and was killed.

—Charles E. Hunt in the Seattle Post—Intelligence.

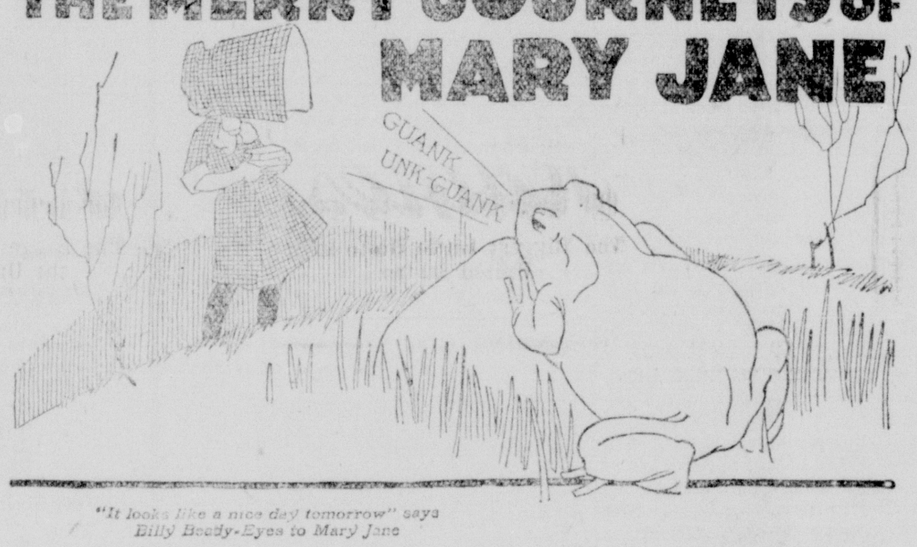
THE MERRY JOURNEYS OF MARY JANE



"It looks like a nice day tomorrow" says Billy Beady-Eyes to Mary Jane

Mary Jane and the Hop Toad

BILLY BEADY-EYES was an old hop-toad who lived in the garden back of Mary Jane's house. He was so fat he could hardly hop—and he was the champion bug-hunter and fly-catcher of the village.

One day Mary Jane went out to ask Billy Beady-Eyes if he thought it was going to rain tomorrow. For hop-toads know all about whether it's going to rain or not. Billy looked up at the sky a minute, and then he said:

"It looks like a nice day tomorrow, but I wouldn't be at all surprised if we had rain. Did you ever eat a bug?" Mary Jane said, No she never did. Her mamma always gave her a big piece of bread, with lots and lots of delicious Mary Jane Syrup on it, when she was hungry.

Billy said he often heard that this was the very nicest thing anybody could eat, and it made little boys and girls fat and healthy and rosy. So she went into the house and brought out a lovely lunch of bread and Mary Jane Syrup. That made Billy her friend for life.

And now, whenever she wants to know whether it's going to rain or anything, all she has to do is go out in the garden and ask Billy. And he comes nearer guessing right than the weather bureau.

GRADUATING CLASS S.T.C. HAS COMPLETED ORGANIZATION

Composed of Those Who Will Get Degree or Life Certificate This Term.

The graduating class of the State Teachers College has completed its organization. It is composed of those who expect to receive a degree or a life diploma, according to the "Green and White Courier." Class day will be celebrated and a class play will be given as well as class parties.

Miss Nell Hudson was chosen president and she together with the sponsors chose the following committees that are now at work:

Class Day: Wave Hulet, Chairman, Edna Turner, LaDonia Murphy, Mildred Burks.

Class Gift: Edith Holt, Bernice Rutledge, Matie Evans.

Class Colors: Mary Wooldridge, Mary Margaret Richey.

The class play has not been chosen yet, but it will be directed by Miss Blanche Dow, instructor in Dramatics.

The class met again Friday afternoon at 2:30 and elected the other officers, Vice President, Secretary and Treasurer.

Ray Cook left last night for St. Louis where he will attend the State meeting of the grain dealers, which is being held there this week.

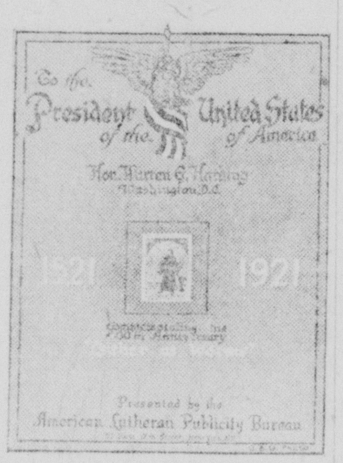
HARDING GOT THE FIRST



To the President of the United States of America
Hon. Warren G. Harding
Washington, D.C.
1521
1921
Presented by the American Lutheran Publicity Bureau

A letter sent to President Harding by Theodore H. Lamprecht, president of the American Lutheran publicity bureau. Attached is the first stamp from the first million of the many stamps which will be distributed broadcast to commemorate the 400th anniversary of the Diet of Worms. It was at the Diet of Worms that Martin Luther refused to recant his principles and that he defied the temporal power of the pope.

The Story of Our States

By JONATHAN BRACE

XXXI.—CALIFORNIA

THERE is an atmosphere of romance enveloping the early history of California which even encircles the origin of the name. About 1520 a Spanish love story was published in which there was an imaginary island in the Far East called California. Some fifteen years later a party of Spanish adventurers came upon the peninsula which we now call Lower California. Believing that they had discovered a romantic island similar to the one in the novel, they called it California. Later on, the territory to the north became known as Alta California or High California and when it became a state, it was accordingly called California. The first settlers were the Franciscan monks who came up from Mexico and established missions, and many are the legends woven around these pioneer Padres. There shortly grew up Mexican settlements around the missions which the wonderful climate and fertile soil prospered.

The government, while under Mexican control, was more or less independent, and at the outbreak of the Mexican war, Fremont, who was later defeated for the presidency, occupied California. When peace was made in 1848, California became United States territory. That same year gold was discovered in the Sacramento Valley and the rush of people to California began. The population grew so rapidly that in 1850 California was admitted as the thirty-first state of the Union. With its 158,297 square miles, it is the largest state except Texas. Politically, its power has been rapidly growing. California now has thirteen presidential electors.

BABLER TAKES A SHOT AT SPENCER

SENATOR HAS LOST CONTROL OF PATRONAGE, HE SAYS.

SAYS HE SAVED SPENCER

Committeeman Also Professes Not To Be Disturbed At Repudiation By Congressmen.

Washington, April 27,—Jacob Babler, Republican National Committeeman for Missouri, declared Monday that he was "not disturbed" by the action of the Missouri Republican Congressmen last week in laying before President Harding a memorial making Senator Spencer their spokesman in patronage matters.

"The Congressmen," said Babler, "have put one over on Spencer. They have shorn him of his potential dispenser and made him a messenger to convey their own wishes to the President. I don't blame the Congressmen for wanting to control by united effort the patronage outside their districts.

"This would not have been possible if the Senator, fearful of losing his own influence, had not become panicky. By tying him up to them they have made him merely one of 15 instead of the general in command. Spencer apparently got into a panic at the thought that some of my friends—the very man to whom he is indebted for his nomination—might be taken care of. By all the rules of the game, the Senator should be cooperating with me. At the meeting of the State Committee in St. Louis early in 1920, called for the purpose of condemning Senator Spencer for his vote on prohibition and his attitude toward the League of Nations, it was my efforts and those of my friends that saved him. I went all over the State to procure indorsements for the renomination of Spencer. That's where the fight on me started.

"Now, instead of playing the game with those who befriended him, Senator Spencer apparently has gone over bag and baggage to those who were originally against him. I am not here in any scramble for patronage. I pay attention to patronage only when I have nothing else to do, and right now I am busy trying to raise Missouri's $100,000 quota of the National Committee campaign deficit. Neither Senator Spencer nor any Missouri Congressman has contributed a dime to this fund. More than half of it has been pledged. Mayor Kiel and William Sacks have obligated themselves to raise $25,000. Dwight Davis has contributed $1000 since the election. Jack Leahy of St. Louis has given $1000, Mrs. A. H. Brueggeman $1000, I. R. Kinkwood, publisher of the Kansas City Star, three or four hundred and I have contributed $500."

Babler said that he had talked to several Missouri Congressmen since he arrived with regard to their success in having "declared themselves in on" Missouri patronage. He added that while here he would talk to John T. Adams of Iowa, who is slated for the National Committee chairmanship to succeed Will Hays, and with other committeemen to reduce Southern representation in Republican national conventions. Babler said that he would oppose reducing the number of delegates from any state that put a full State and congressional ticket in the field.

The 1921 Girl

Take your little powder puff
And dab your little nose;
Dip into the rogue pot,
Where the color grows.

Take your little lip stick,
Make a rosebud red.
Don't forget your eyebrows;
Pencil them in lead.

When your beau asks, "Will you—"
Look so very shy.
Do your best at blushing,
Roll each limpid eye.

Powder nosey paler;
A little closer steer.
Purse those rose-bud lips and
Murmur soft, "Yes, dear."

Then, before he knows it,
Engaged to him you'll be.
When all he meat to ask was,
"Will yoh go out to tea?"

URGES UNIFORM TEACHERS DRESS

JACKSON COUNTY EDUCATOR CRITICISES SHORT SKIRTS

BAKER FAVORS BILL

To Prevent "Folk From Getting Out Of The Cradle and Beginning To Teach School."

Jefferson City, Mo., April 27,—L. F. Blackburn, Superintendent of Public Schools of Jackson County, addressing the County School Superintendents' convention, which opened a session Monday, said that "teachers should not dress in such extremes as to invite comment and criticism."

He recommended a law regulating the style of dress of women teachers, saying that it is the duty of the teacher to set a good example in dress to her pupils. He said he was discussing extremes of dress aside from the question of public morals.

"A law should be passed to cause women teachers to dress befitting their station," he added.

After concluding his speech Blackburn said he had reference to the prevailing short skirts and high-heel shoes. He said high-heel shoes constitute a menace to health of teacher who must stand much of time, and puts the notion of wearing that sort of shoes in the minds of the girl pupils. Blackburn is president of the County Superintendents' Association.

State Superintendent Sam A. Baker said some time the Legislature will enact a law to prevent "folks from getting out of the cradle and beginning to teach school." He said this while discussing the fact that "many mere children are teaching school in Missouri."

Baker said, however, that with proper assessments of property and adequate salaries for teachers, the "experienced teachers with some age and judgement will return to the profession and it will not be necessary for school boards to employ immature boys and girls."

While discussing standards of qualification, Baker said recently a teacher wrote to him asking who is the Governor of the state and who is State Superintendent. He continued:

"Among the questions prepared for a recent teachers' examination in my office was this one "Who was Frances Willard?' I thought since Frances Willard Day has been set apart by the Legislature that the question was a proper one.

"One applicant answering that question said: 'Frances Willard was champion prize fighter of the world.' Another question was: 'Name five political subdivisions of the United States.'

"One answered it in this way: 'Socialists, anarchists, Democrats and Republicans. The Republicans are thought most of because they do the most for the people.'

Baker said that statistics compiled by P. P. Claxton, United States Commissioner of Education, disclosed that $22,700,000,000 was expended last year for "things which people can do without," and that only $16,645,000,000 had been expended for education since the government was organized.

He listed the following expenditures of 1920 as prepared by Claxton: Cosmetics, Face powders, etc., $750,000,000; furs, $300,000,000; soft drinks, $450,000,000; jewelry, $200,000; drinks, $450,000,000; cigarettes, $810,000,000; cigars $500,000,000; jewelry, $200,000,000; luxurious service, $3,000,000; joy rides, $3,000,000. He urges superintendents to caution school boards against striking down the tax levies because the valuations have been increased.

The Forgotten.

We men go up the churchyard lane
With joke and song and ribald cry,
But silent, just beyond the wall,
The dead that were out mother lie.

And here and there along the close,
Deep-trodden in the rain-soaked grass,
The dreamless, uncomplaining dust
Will glow to hear our footsteps pass.

—Godfrey Elton in Westminster Gazette.

FATHER BRADY HONORED ADMINISTRATOR OF DIOCESE

Is Made Assistant to Bishop Burke, Whose Continued Ill Health Makes One Necessary.

The Rev. Father James P. Brady, pastor of St. Mary's Church in St. Joseph, has been made administrator of the Roman Catholic diocese of St. Joseph. Father Brady is quite well known in Maryville and in the Conception Community. He is a brother of Mrs. Mary Keeler, who up to a few months ago was a resident of Maryville.

Asked how the appointment was made, Father Brady said:

"Some three weeks ago Bishop Burke had a personal interview with the apostolic delegate, Archbishop Bonzano, in Washington and requested that such an appointment be made owing to the continued ill condition of his (the bishop's) health. The delegate made these representations to the sacred congregation of the consistory in Rome, of which the pope is the prefect, and as a result Bishops Burke's request for my appointment was granted.

"The position is known as that of apostolic administrator, because the appointment is made by the Holy See and bears with it episcopal jurisdiction in the administration of the spiritual affairs of the diocese. It does not, however, confer the character of office of bishop, to which belongs the right to ordain, confirm, etc.

"The canonical formality of presenting to the bishop and the diocesan consultors and chancellor, the decree of appointment, took place at my residence yesterday. My position as pastor of St. Mary's parish remains unchanged, and the Bishop Burke still remains titular bishop of this diocese, with all the dignities and honors of the office."

Father Brady was ordained at Conception Monastery in 1897 by Bishop Burke. He served seven years at the Cathedral, first as assistant to the late Father Andrew Newman and then as rector. He took charge of St. Mary's in 1904, where several years ago he erected an imposing new church. Five years ago he was made dean, and upon the death of Rev. C. Linnenkamp, three years ago last October, he was made vicar general of the diocese.
